Year: 2006

Journal: Transactions of the Charles S. Peirce Society

Keywords: Foucault, Power

Abstract: The article discusses the argument that pragmatists must be aware about the concept of power and its consequences. It reflects the beliefs of Michel Foucalt and Charles Peirce. Peirce being a pragmatism's initiator believes in semiotics whereas Focault believes that language and signs is not the great model of language but more on action. Both beliefs can be merged by regarding philosophy not just as a form of knowledge but it can also become a way of guiding actions.
