

Record in the Commens Bibliography. Retrieved from http://www.commens.org/bibliography/journal_article/howat-andrew-2014-prospects-peircean-truth, 23.04.2024.

Type: Article in Journal

Author: Howat, Andrew

Title: Prospects for Peircean Truth

Year: 2014

Journal: Canadian Journal of Philosophy

Volume: 44

Issue: 3

Pages: 365-387

Keywords: Truth

Abstract: Peircean Truth (PT) is the view that truth is in some sense epistemically constrained, constrained that is by what we would, if we inquired long enough and well enough, eventually come to believe. Contemporary Peirceans offer various different formulations of the view, which can make it difficult, particularly for critics, to see exactly how PT differs from popular alternatives such as correspondence theories or deflationism. This article, therefore, considers four possible formulations of PT, and sets out the different objections and challenges they each face and their relationships with one another. I focus upon the question of what, if anything, PT has to say about the property of truth.

DOI: 10.1080/00455091.2014.950473

Language: English