Term: Logical Validity

Quote: ...a leading principle, which contains no fact not implied or observable in the premises, is termed a logical principle, and the argument it governs is termed a complete, in contradistinction to an incomplete, argument, or enthymeme.

[—]

We may here distinguish between logical and extralogical validity; the former being that of a complete, the latter that of an incomplete argument.

References: W 4:167-168; CP 3.166, 168

Date of Quote: 1880

URL: http://www.commens.org/dictionary/entry/quote-algebra-logic-7