Inference

An argumentation within one’s own mind, by which the thinker is more or less inclined to believe something, or by which he sees that something must be true, is called an inference.

References: MS [R] 839

Date of Quote: nd

URL: http://www.commens.org/dictionary/entry/quote-fragments-r-3