Term: Perceptual Judgment
Quote: It is a characteristic of perceptual judgments that each of them relates to some singular to which no other proposition relates directly, but, if it relates to it at all, [it] does so by relating to that perceptual judgment.

[—]

Had I [...] asserted that a perceptual judgment could be a universal proposition, I should have fallen into rank absurdity. For reaction is existence and the perceptual judgment is the cognitive product of a reaction.

References: EP 2:209-10; CP 5.153-6
Date of Quote: 1903
URL: http://www.commens.org/dictionary/entry/quote-harvard-lectures-pragmatism-lecture-vi-4