The logical universe is that object with which the utterer and the interpreter of any proposition must be well-acquainted and mutually understand each other to be well acquainted, and must understand that all their discourse refers to it.