Term: First Intention
Quote: A first intention, so called, is not a direct intention to act, nor even a direct attention to such intention. It is thought in symbols, as for example language; and language is itself thought about thought, this latter thought not being generally direct thought of action.
References: MS [R] 288:33
Date of Quote: 1905