Induction may, therefore, be defined as argument which assumes that a whole collection, from which a number of instances have been taken at random, has all the common characters of those instances ...

References: CP 2.515

Date of Quote: 1867

URL: http://www.commens.org/dictionary/entry/quote-natural-classification-arguments-2