Term: Volition
Quote: In volition [...] there is always a double consciousness, the volition being at once regarded as an effort of one subject and a resistance of another. Likewise in perception there is a double consciousness of an ego and a non-ego. Thus there is a double consciousness which ought to replace the narrower volition of the old divisions of consciousness.
References: MS [R] 325:7
Date of Quote: 1906 [c.]
URL: http://www.commens.org/dictionary/entry/quote-pragmatism-made-easy-1