Reasoning

...there seems to be considerable importance in insisting that reasoning is a performance of the physiological organism under the governance of reason, and not exclusively confined to that ens rationis called “the mind,” – a sort of tertium quid between the body and the soul.

References: MS [R] 634:6

Date of Quote: 1909

URL: http://www.commens.org/dictionary/entry/quote-preface