Term: Real

Quote: [The] real state of things is something which is "so," that is, has a certain determination, or specialization, or being, whether it be opined to be so or otherwise. Therefore, the reader holds that for every question not nonsensical, there is a certain determination of being which is completely independent of what you, or I, or any man or generations of men may opine about it.

References: MS [R] 596:13-14

Date of Quote: 1902-03 [c.]

URL: http://www.commens.org/dictionary/entry/quote-reasons-rules-18