A first-intentional relation is one the concept of which may be formed by direct generalization and abstraction from observations of its relates.